REPUBLICAN STATE TICKET.

GOVERNOR,
JAMES A. BEAVER, of Centre county.

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
W. T. DAVIES, of Bradford county.

JUDGE OF SUPREME COURT,
WILLIAM HENRY RAWLE, of Phila.

SECRETARY OF INTERNAL AFFAIRS,
JOHN M. GREER, of Butler county.

EDITORIAL BRIEFS.

THE question seems to be: Shall Cameron or Mitchell be "boss?"

CONGRESS has done well in killing the bill providing for a new Arctic expedition.

THERE is trouble in the Arctic regions. It is reported that the icebergs are all at sea.

DEMOCRATIC journals throughout the State have already commenced their vile personal abuse of General Beaver. If an angel was nominated for an office these same editors would find some excuse for venting their spleen.

THE news of the accident to Hon. Russell Errett was heard with sincere regret by his many friends, and many expressions of sympathy were uttered. His services are much too valuable to lose at this juncture in the contest in the House.

THE North American says it has already expressed its belief that the Independents were not fairly recognizing the position of General Beaver in this fight, and it has condemned the injustice which denies to him the place he has won by popular desire, upon the ground that his nomination was not antagonized by the machine. But to the revolutionists logic is poor food, and therefore the actual standing of General Beaver as the candidate of the people has weighed nothing.

SENATOR JOHN STEWART, who was nominated in Philadelphia on Wednesday for Governor of Pennsylvania, is said to be a high-toned gentleman, but he does not have such strong claims on the people of the State as General Beaver. Thousands of votes from all parties should be drawn to the Regular Republican nominee, not only because he is the choice of the party, but because he is entitled to the best that a grateful people can give him, while there is no reason for a single Republican vote being given to the support of the so-called Independent candidate.

"A NOMINATION on the Democratic ticket in Centre county is equal to an election."—Lock Haven Evening Express.

This we deny emphatically. That the Democratic ticket is almost always elected we admit; but is not so much owing to the Democratic majority as to the monstrous incompetency of Republican local leaders. Methods are used which repel instead of attract the scattering vote to the support of the Republican ticket. The people of Centre county are as susceptible to the influences of civilization and reform as those of other regions, and with proper treatment they may yet be induced to give their united support to the Republican ticket.

THE woman suffrage movement never before suffered such uncompromizing opposition as it did at Albany, New York State, on Monday of last week, when a member moved the right to vote should not be granted to women under fifty years. There may be women in the the State who have reached fifty years, but no one ever heard it from their own lips, and if any legislator imagines that inspectors of election can elicit affirmative information on the subject he is wofully mistaken. But perhaps the mover of the bill meant in a roundabout way to entirely prohibit woman suffrage; if so he hit on exactly the method.

The Longfellow Memorial.

The death of Longfellow has been speedily followed by the formation of a society whose object it is to pay tribute to the poet's genius and character by the erection of an appropriate monument to his memory This society, which has taken the title of the Longfellow Memorial Association, and of which James Russell Lowell has been chosen president, has issued a circular inviting the co-operation of the public in the execution of the project which it has undertaken. The plan of its operations is well conceived and there ought to be no great difficulty in effecting its accomplishment. As most people are aware, the greater part of Longfellow's life was passed in the city of Cambridge. There he removed in early manhood, and there in a fine old-fashioned house, beneath whose roof George Washington himself had once found shelter, the poet continued to reside until the day of his death. The river Charles, over whose quiet waters Longfellow loved to look, and which he has made classic by his graceful verse, flows in front of the house, and it is the design of the Memorial Association to raise, by popular subscription, a fund large enough to admit of its purchasing from those into whose hands the poet's estate has passed that portion of the grounds appurtenant to the mansion, which lies between the house and the river, and of erecting thereon an appropriate and enduring memorial, and further to provide for the permanent preservation of the house itself in the event of its passing out of the hands of its present holders.

The programme of the society also contemplates the dedication of the ground which it proposes to acquire to public uses forever, so that a spot which by reason of its associations is aleady in some sort the property of the people may be made theirs in fact and in perpetuity. As it is befitting that the memorial should be national in its character, the association invites subscriptions of one dollar each, a donation which certainly comes within the ability of most by whom Longfellow's writings are appreciated, and to whom his verse has been the messenger of comfort, of consolation and of encouragement. We cannot doubt that this invitation will meet with a hearty and general response.

Longfellow was not only pupular as a writer; he was in an exceptional measure esteemed and beloved as a man. His gentle, kindly and unsullied character was so faithfully reflected in his verse that few could read his books without feeling a kindly regard, almost personal in its nature, for their gifted author, and if only a small number, comparatively speaking, of those to whom his poetry was welcome, and to whom it brought both profit and pleasure, were to become subscribers to the fund, the Memorial Association would soon have more money in its treasury than is needed for the complete realization of its plans.

It would probably be objected that Longfellow needs no monument to honor and perpetuate his memory, and such is indeed the truth. The poetry with which the Anglo-Saxon literature has been enriched by his genius is a more lasting and glorious memorial than anything in stone or brass that could be erected. But that is no reason why the poet's fellow countrymen should not in some such appropriate manner as that suggested show their appreciation of a genius which has shed lustre upon American letters and won the admiration of the civilized world. It will not be creditable to the United States if the movement which has been set afoot falls short by a hair's breadth of complete success.—Phil'a North American.

HAS the "bossism," so-called, of Cameron been so detrimental to the interests of the Republican party of this State that the people will insist upon transferring that peculiar province to Mitchell?

Address of the Republican State Committee.

It is our pleasure and duty to publish below as much as space will permit of the admirable address to the Republicans of Pennsylvania recently issued by the Republican State Committee:

HEADQUARTERS REPUBLICAN STATE COMMITTEE, ST. CLOUD HOTEL,
PHILADELPHIA, May 17, 1882.

To the Republicans of Pennsylvania:

The Republican State Committee thus early announces the opening of its Headquarters, and asks the prompt co-operation of all active Republicans to the end that the details of what must prove a great canvass may receive the most careful attention.

The Harrisburg Convention has submitted to the suffrages of the people a great ticket and a glorious platform. The ticket embodies a group of names which for ability, fitness and representative character, it is impossible to excel. Gen'l Beaver is not only the type of our soldiery—of that host which counted in its ranks nearly a quarter of a million of Pennsylvanians when the Union of the States was imperilled—but his deeds and sufferings for the cause place him in the front rank of the heroes of that war. As Republicans we vowed in its darker hours that political ingratitude should never be shown to any of these heroes, "all other things being equal." In this instance all other things are more than equalled; they are excelled in so far that our maimed soldier candidate for Governor embodies all the higher qualities of the statesman, the orator and the Christian. Senator Davies for Lieutenant Governor, represents the free unshackled talent of the section which gave us a Wilmot and a Grow. Wm. Henry Rawle, for the Supreme Court, is the best product of Philadelphia's brilliant bar, and in the world of legal letters bears a fame so bright that our continent cannot bind it. John M. Greer, for Secretary of Internal Affairs, is as strong in politics as in physique, and throughout a distinguished career in the State Senate has been recognized as champion of the men who have developed our rivers of oil and made the world their channel.

The ticket thus fairly and fully represents every living element of Republicanism. The platform is more pronounced than any ever before adopted in the State—pronounced in seeking every legitimate political advance touching improvement of methods and the earliest possible triumph of principles.

Pennsylvania is now freer in her forms of Republican primary action than any other State in the Union. She inaugurated district representation in National Conventions, and now more fully enforces this policy than any of her sister States. The present platform and the rules embodied therein secure to primary action for State Conventions every tangible claim to increased liberty, and these are political reforms of more rapid growth than any known to our history.

The constitutional law of Pennsylvania fixes the number of Senators and representatives at 251, a maximum which the platform preserves in the selection of Delegates to future State Conventions, but it at the same time wisely protects the primary right of each Republican voter in the declaration that delegates shall be selected as Senators and Representatives are. This is popular and representative suffrage carried into primary action, giving to local sovereignty the say whether it shall be popular or representative. Either is a great advance, and in the advance the party of the State has only refrained from interference with the right of home rule in primary details.

Look carefully at the platform, and you will see not only successive but culminating steps to every remedy, and steps pointing to every liberty which wisdom can suggest. These are reforms of to-day. Only envenomed sophistry can call them reforms of to-morrow. The ticket with high honor recognizes every element of the party; the platform embodies every principle which the knowledge of men in dispassionate conference, committee, or convention, could suggest as abreast of the times.

The Republican party redeems its pledges. It has never forfeited its word, and neither misconstruction nor taunt can shake its record or purpose in this regard. Accomplished reforms will be maintained, promised reforms will be realized, and that they may be maintained and realized the State committee asks all who lean toward Republicanism to fall into line under the old standard, that a victory sure to be won may be doubly assured.

In a contest where nearly all is at stake they do best who are most willing to sacrifice personal desires, individual shades of opinion, or personal ambition and interest, for the common cause. In such contests a shrewd and unscrupulous enemy too often prompts the lifting of the red hand of faction, so that it may serve as a 'will-o'-the-wisp" to lead the unwary aside and into quagmires, where they must remain without a flag, without a purpose, and without a goal.

There is but one enemy to fight. It is the old one, which in major part was false to the Union in its hours of danger; which subsequently stood but as an obstruction to the rights of man; which to-day represents a reaction opposed to American labor, to our material advancement in manufactures and commerce, to the redemption of our nation's pledges. With settled purpose not to be diverted from their object, the Republicans of Pennsylvania will face this common enemy, and with it alone decide the great issues of the conflict.

And the better to do this let all Republicans who have any suggestion to make, correspond with their State and County Committees,—counsel with their neighbors,—invite and encourage the ever-efficient aid of their local and metropolitan Republican press—prompt the active to greater activity,—inspire effort in the new and untried—hasten primary action where haste can do no wrong,—anticipate in the earliest hours of the canvass that machinery of the law which requires early registries of voters—and in all things get ready for a great battle. Serve early and manly notice upon the enemy that every honorable effort and resource shall be employed to achieve a victory which many regard as vital to the great Republican party and its principles.

By order of the Republican State Committee.

THOS. V. COOPER,
Chairman.

The Comet now Visible.

The new comet now visible in the northern skies is likely to disappoint some who anticipated a brilliant celestial visitor. From the calculations made by Mr. Hind, the English astronomer, from the Harvard and Albany observatories, and those of Professor Tacchini at Rome, the comet's perihelion passage will occur on June 10. The intensity of its light will then be more than fifteen times as great as it was when first discovered by Mr. Wells. At the ascending node, which it will pass July 1, it will approach to a distance of only 444,500 miles of the earth, or, roughly speaking, to about twice the distance of the moon. Its present velocity is about forty miles per second, but this will be more than doubled as it makes its nearest approach to the sun, the second week of next month. The tail of the comet immediately after its perihelion passage may undergo remarkable change under solar influence, as did that of the great comet of 1680, which was found by Newton to have been no less than twenty million leagues long and to have occupied only two days in its emission from the comet's body. Though the present comet approaches nearer the sun than many of its predecessors we may contemplate with serenity the possibility of its collision with the great luminary. If the sun's atmosphere, as is probable, contains oxygen, the comet's combustion would take place long before it reached the heaving solar surface, and "the bombarding material," as Mr. Mottieu Williams forcibly says, "would be a great gas bubble, a swiftly rushing blast of carbonic oxide, carbonic acid and aqueous vapor," producing a huge sun spot bordered by billows of flame. This might give us another aurora, but it is doubtful whether terrestrial thermometers would sensible respond to the solar tempest thus occasioned.—N. Y. Herald.

SOME ladies at Pleasant Plains, Staten Island, having found out that a pool room is an iniquitous thing, have undertaken to close up one which is open at that place. They have not undertaken to do this by moral suasion, nor have they sought to convert the proprietor. They have made a business matter of it and offered to buy out the establishment. The offer had not been definitely acted upon at last accounts, but in all probability if the amount offered is large enough it will be accepted. Perhaps, however, that would not be the end of pool rooms in that town. Other people could come in and start them, and in all probability would do so, just as some telegraph companies are started, for the the purpose of being brought out. There are lots of people in the world wicked enough to do such things.

How to Treat Grass.

Persons who desire a nice lawn will find the following from the American Agriculturist on the treatment of grass in early summer of interest: In the spring months when there are frequent showers and the grass is in rapid growth, the lawn mower may be used as often as once a week with benefit. But in our climate, with its extremes and uncertainties, such fixed rules as "mow once a week," will lead to trouble, if followed. With the first drought the grass on the lawn shows a diminished growth, and is often really at a standstill. At such times nothing worse can be done to the grass than to cut it. All that there is above ground is needed to sustain the root, and incidentally to shade the surface. In the treatment of lawns, as in all other gardening operations, some thought should be given to the present condition of the plants and the object to be gained by any operation. The kind of grass varies the time or frequency of cutting. A fine, thick bottom growth of June grass or blue grass may be kept pretty closely cut. But many front yards and lawns have a timothy or herd's grass sod, and if this is allowed to grow eight or twelve inches high and then cut it will leave a woody stubble, and if dry weather prevails it will be a long time before a new growth from the root comes up, the plot in the meantime having the appearance of a burned over surface or a dry stubble at best.

THE letter of Hon. Thomas M. Marshall, declining the regular Republican nomination for congressman at large, will be read with mingled feelings by our Democratic and Independent friends. They have waited for the advent of this document with the utmost impatience because of Mr. Marshall's well known views concerning party management and because certain imaginative correspondents had led them to believe that he intended to enact the role of a mad bull in a China shop. The letter must be a sore disappointment to them, for while Mr. Marshall leaves no room for doubt as to his convictions that the machinery of the Republican party ought always to be under the control of the masses of the party he makes it equally plain that he does not believe in that sort of reform which destroys the party organization. He believes with thousands of his fellow Republicans, who are just as earnest and just as honest as the Independents, that the Republican party can be reformed from within, and he means to work along that line. That is an illustration of his good sense, though it is as wormwood in the mouths of the advanced liberals.

AFFAIRS in Egypt seem to be fast assuming the dread shape of civil war. The Khedive has informed the dignitaries surrounding him, and his principal military officers that he has assumed supreme command of the Army and shall maintain strict discipline. The officers replied in solently that they would not submit to the ultimatum of England and France, or suffer the interference of any Power except Turkey. Later the military commanders of Alexandria, the Notables, the Ulemas and military officers demanded the reinstatement of Arabi. The Khedive refused the request and says that the Porte sustains him in his position. If Turkey interferes to settle the matter it is not likely that the Sultan will withdraw unless he is forced to do so. His promises go for little.

AND now Mitchell is a "Boss," or rather he wanted to be "Boss" and have his friend Merrick nominated for Governor, but when Wharton Barker, a bigger "Boss," sat down upon him, he got mad, sulked and announced that his Senatorial duties would prevent his taking part in the work of the campaign.

If you would retain the love of your affianced, young man, do not permit her to inveigle you into an ice cream saloon. If you do a coolness will soon exist between you.

A SINGULAR and rather offensive community inhabit the town of Liberal on the western border of Missouri. The town was founded by a man named Walser, formerly a union soldier, who took up most of the land in the vicinity and sells only to those who renounce the doctrines of orthodox Christianity. A bitter war is waged against a few Christian families who are charged with obtaining lots under false pretenses. The town contains about 300 people and maintains a public hall, a library and a monthly magazine, all dedicated to the propagation of "liberal" ideas. The school children study, in addition to the usual text books, a "Positive Catechism," and "The Young Liberal's Guide," and every precaution is taken that they shall "not be contaminated with the putrid carcasses of the dead past."

"ONE of our most popular admirals," says the Continental Times, "and one of the best sailors that ever sailed our seas, was curiously scored off by his own bandmaster on board of his own ship the other day at Gib. To a right lordly banquet the admiral had invited sundry foreign naval officers, and during the mess one of them asked if the band might play 'Rule Britannia' Now it seems that this Jingoistic tune had been for some time discontinued on board. However, the courteous admiral summoned the somewhat stolid looking bandmaster and asked him if the band could play the national naval hymn. '"Rule Britannia,' sir,' said the stolid one; 'well p'raps we might find it in the "Reminiscences of England!"' The foreign officers preserved a diplomatic reticence, which was kind of them."

THE PRICE OF A DRINK.

"Fourpence a glass!" Does any one think
That is really the price of a drink?
"Fourpence a glass" I hear you say;
"Why that isn't very much to pay."
Ah no indeed, 'tis a very small sum
You are passing over 'twixt finger and thumb;
And if that were all you give away,
It wouldn't be very much to pay.
The price of a drink? Let him decide
Who has lost his courage and lost his pride,
And lies a groveling heap of clay,
Not far removed from a beast to-day.
The price of a drink? Let that one tell
Who sleeps to-night in a murderer's cell,
And feels within him the fires of hell.
Honor and virtue, love and truth,
All the glory and pride of youth,
Hopes of manhood, the wreath of fame,
High endeavor, and noble aim—
These are treasures thrown away
As the price of a drink from day to day.
"Fourpence a glass! How satan laughed,
As over the bar the young man quaffed
The beaded liquor; for the demon knew
The terrible work that drink would do;
And before the morning the victim lay
With his life blood swiftly ebbing away;
And that was the price he paid, alas!
For the pleasure of taking a social glass.
The price of a drink? If you want to know
What some are so willing to pay for it go
Through that wretched tenement over there,
Where dingy windows and broken stair,
Where foul disease like a vampire crawls
With outstretched wings o'er the mouldy walls,
There poverty dwells with her hungry brood,
Wild-eyed as demons for lack of food;
There shame in a corner crouches low;
There violence deals its cruel blow;
And innocent ones are thus accursed
To pay the price of another's thirst
"Fourpence a glass!" Oh, if that were all,
The sacrifice would indeed be small!
But the money's worth the least amount,
We pay; and whoever will keep account
Will learn the terrible waste and blight
That follows this ruinous appetite.
"Fourpence a glass!" Does any one think
That that is really the price of a drink?

THE CONDUCTOR.

Who is it that comes down the aisle
With such a bland, æsthetic smile,
And closely watching you the while;
And in a voice rough as a file
Says—"Tickets?"

Who is it that will gently stare
Into your face and ask for fare;
And if the dimes you cannot spare
Will rudely "bounce" you then and there,
The wicked.

Who siezes you about the waist
And wildly hurls you into space,
To mar your hands and bruise your face?
No time for thought—no days of grace
He gives you.

Who is it says "No smoking here,"
And frankly takes you by the ear
To guide you further toward the rear,
'Mid smokers' fumes and lager beer,
Then leaves you?

Our Story Teller.

Two Dozen Buttons.

Betty sighed. Now why she should have sighed at this particular moment no one on earth could tell. And it was all the more exasperating because John had just generously put into her little shapely hand a brand-new $10 bill. And here began the trouble.

"What's the matter?" he said, his face falling at the faint sound and his mouth clapping together in what those who knew him but little called an "obstinate pucker." "Now, what is it?'

Betty, who had just begun to change the sigh into a merry little laugh rippling all over the corners of the red lips, stopped suddenly, tossed her head and, with a small jerk noway conciliatory, sent out the words:

"You needn't insinuate, John, that I am always troublesome."

"I didn't insinuate—who's talking of insinuating?" cried he, thoroughly incensed at the very idea, and backing away a few steps, he glared down from a tremendous height in extreme irritation. "It's you yourself who is forever insinuating and all that, and then for you to put it on me—it's really abominable!"

The voice was harsh, and the eyes that looked down into hers were not pleasant to behold.

"And if you think, John Peabody, that I'll stand and have such things said to me, you miss your guess—that's all!" cried Betty, with two big red spots coming in her cheeks as she tried to draw her little erect figure up to its utmost dimensions. "Forever insinuating! I guess you wouldn't have said that before I married you. Oh, now you can, of course!"

"Didn't you say it first, I'd like to know?" cried John, in great excitement, drawing nearer to the small creature he called "wife," who was gazing at him with blazing eyes of indignation; "I can't endure everything!"

"And if you bear more than I do," cried Betty, wholly bevond control now, "why, then I'll give up," and she gave a bitter little laugh and tossed her head again.

And here they were in the midst of a quarrel! These two, but a year before, had promised to love and protect and help each other through life!

"Now," said John, and he brought his hand down with such a bang on the table before him that Betty nearly skipped out of her little shoes—only she controlled the start, for she would have died before she had let Jonn see it, "we will have no more of this nonsense!"

His face was very pale and the lines around the mouth so drawn that it would have gone to any one's heart to have seen their expression.

"I don't know how you will change it or help it," said Betty, lightly, to hide her dismay at the turn affairs had taken, "I'm sure!" and she pushed back the light, waving hair from her forehead with a saucy, indifferent gesture.

That hair that John always smoothed when he petted her, tired or disheartened, and called her child." Her gesture struck to his heart as he glanced at her sunny locks and the cool, indifferent face underneath, and before he knew it he was saying:

"There is no help for it now, I suppose."

"Oh, yes, there is," said Betty, still in the cool, calm way that ought not to have deceived him. But men know so little of women's hearts, although they may live with them for years in closest friendship. "You needn't try to endure it, John Peabody, if you don't want to. I'm sure I don't care!"

"What do you mean?"

Her husband grasped her arms and compelled the merry brown eyes to look up to him.

"I can go back to mother's," said Betty, provokingly. "She wants me any day; and then you can live quietly and to suit yourself, and it will be better all around."

Instead of bringing out a violent protestation of fond affection and remorse, which she fully expected, John drew himself up, looked at her fixedly for a long, long minute, then dropped her arm, and, with white lips, said slowly:

"Yes, it may be as you say better all around. You know best;" and was gone from the room before she could recover from her astonishment enough to utter a sound.

With a wild cry Betty rushed across the room, first tossing the $10 bill savagely as far as she could throw it, and flinging herself on the comfortable old sofa, broke into a flood of bitter tears—the first she had shed during her married life.

"How could he have done it? Oh, what have I said? Oh, John, John!"

The bird twittered in his little cage over in the window among the plants. Betty remembered like a flash how John and she filled the seed cup that very morning; how he laughed when she tried to put it in between the bars, and when she couldn't reach without getting upon a chair he took her in his great arms and held her up, just like a child, that she might fix it to suit herself. And the "bits" that he said in his tender way, they had gone down to the depths of her foolish little heart, sending her about her work singing for very gladness of spirit. And now!

"Betty stuffed her fingers hard into her rose ears to shut out the bird's chirping.

"If he only knew why I sighed," she moaned. "Oh, my husband! Birthdays—nothing will make any difference now. Oh, why can't I die?"

How long she stayed there, crouched down on the old sofa, she never knew. Over and over the dreadful scene she went, realizing its worst features each time in despair until a voice out in the kitchen said: "Betty!" and heavy footfalls proclaimed that some one was on the point of breaking in upon her uninvited.

Betty sprang up, choked back her sobs, and tried with all her might to compose herself and remove all traces of her trouble.

The visitor was the worst possible one she could have had under the circumstances. Crowding herself on terms of the closest intimacy with the pretty bride, who, with her husband, had moved into the village a twelvemonth previous, Miss Elvira Simmons had made the very most of her opportunities, and by dint of making great parade over helping her in some domestic work, such as house-cleaning and dress-making and the like, the maiden lady had managed to ply her other vocation, that of news-gatherer, at one and the same time, pretty effectually.

She always called her by her first name though Betty resented it; and she made a great handle of her friendship on every occasion, making John rage violently and vow a thousand times the "old maid" should walk.

But she had—and now, scenting dimly, like a carrion after its own prey, that trouble might come to the pretty little white house—the make-mischief had come to do her work, if devastation had not already commenced.

"Been crying!" she said, more plainly than politely, sinking down into the pretty chintz covered rocking chair with an energy that showed that she meant to stay, and made the chair creak fearfully.

"Only folks do say that you and your husband don't live happy—but la! I wouldn't mind—I know 'taint your fault."

Betty's heart stood still. Had it come this! John and she not to live happy! To be sure they didn't as she remembered with a pang the dreadful scene of words and hot tempers; but had it gotten around so soon—a story in everybody's mouth.

With all her distress of mind she was saved from opening her mouth. So Miss Simmons, failing in that was forced to go on.

"An' I tell folks so," she said, rocking herself back and forth to witness the effect of her words, "when they get to talkin' so you can't blame me if things don't go easy for you. I'm sure!"

"You tell folks?" repeated Betty vaguely and standing still. "What? I don't understand."

"Why, that the blame is all his'n," cried the old maid, exasperated at her strange mood and her dullness. "I say, says I, why there couldn't no one live with him, let alone that pretty wife he's got. That's what I say, Betty. And then I tell 'em what a queer man he is, how cross, an —"

"And you dare to tell people such things of my husband?" cried Betty, drawing herself up to her extremest height, and towering so over the old woman in the chair that she jumped in confusion at the storm she had raised, and stared blindly into the blazing eyes and face rosy with righteous indignation—her only thought was how to get away from the storm she had raised but could not stop. But she was forced to stay, for Betty stood just in front of the chair and blocked up the way, so she slunk back into the smallest corner of it and took it as best she could. "My husband!" cried Betty, dwelling with pride on the pronoun—at least, if they were to part, she would say it over lovingly as much as she could till the last moment; and then, when the time did come why, the people should know that it was John's fault, "the best, the kindest, the noblest husband that ever was given to a woman. I've made him more trouble than you can guess; my hot temper has vexed him—I've been cross, and impatient and—"

"Hold!" cried a voice, "you're talking against my wife!" and in a moment big John Peabody rushed through the door, grasped the little woman in his arms and folded her to his heart, right before old maid and all.

"Oh," said Miss Simmons, sitting up straight and setting her spectacles more firmly.

"And now that you've learned all that you can," said John, turning around to her, still holding Betty, "why—you may go."

"The chair was vacant. A dissolving view through the door was all that was to be seen of the gossip, who started up the road hurriedly, leaving peace behind.

"Betty," said John, some half hour afterward, "what was the sigh for? I don't care now, but I did think, dear, and it cut me to the heart, how you might have married richer. I longed to put ten times ten into your hand, Betty, and it galled me because I couldn't.

Betty smiled and twisted away from his grasp. Running into the bedroom she presently returned, still smiling, with a bundle rolled up in a clean towel. This she put on her husband's knee, who stared at her wonderingly.

"I didn't mean," she said, unpinning the bundle, "to get it out now, but I shall have to. Why, John, day after to-morrow is your birthday!"

"So 'tis," said John. "Gracious! has it come around so soon?"

"And you dear boy," said Betty, shaking out before his eyes a pretty brown affair, all edged with silk of the bluest shade, that presently assumed the proportions of a dressing gown, "this is to be your present. But you must be dreadfully surprised, John, when you get it, for oh, I didn't want you to know it!"

John made an answer he thought best. When he spoke again he said, perplexed, while a small pucker of bewilderment settled between his eyes:

"But I don't see, Betty, what this thing," laying one finger on the gown, "had to do with the sigh."

"That," said Betty, and then she broke into a merry laugh, that got so mixed up with the dimples and laughing brown eyes that for a moment she could not finish. "Oh, John, I was worrying so over those buttons! They weren't good, but they were they were the best I could do then. And I'd only bought 'em yesterday. Two whole dozen. And when you put that $10 bill into my hand, I didn't hardly know it, but I suppose I did give one little bit of a sigh, for I was so provoked that I had not waited buying them till to-day."

John caught up the little woman, dressing gown and all. I don't think they have ever quarreled since—at least I have never heard of it.

Fogg says he doesn't mind giving a half dollar to the thirsty wayfarer who stops him on the street; but Fogg is always in a hurry, and it dries up all the milk of human kindness in his sympathetic breast to have a fellow stand athwart his way with that everlasting formula: "I beg pardon, sir; I hope you will excuse me for stopping you in the street, sir; could you wait one moment, sir; I'll detain you but a moment, sir," and so forth and so on. Fogg says if the fellow would only blurt out, "Give us a dime," or some thing else equally brief and equally to the point, he wouldn't care. Of course, he says, he shouldn't give the money, but it would save him a great deal of vexation, and save time to both himself and the wayfaring man.

A political flirt: "I say, pa," said young hopeful at breakfast this morning; "what do they mean when they talk about a 'political flirt?'" "A political flirt, my son, is a despicable kind of a man who goes from one party to another for the sake of office. "Why do you ask?" "Oh, nawthin' much. Only up to the store last night they said you was the meanest political flirt in these parts, and I thought at the time it wasn't much of a compliment. Another cup of coffee ma!" "Don't you give it to the impudent scamp," screamed the old gentleman. "Go away from the table, sir. I'll teach you—you—you."

Professionally ruined: "Yes," said the doctor, "I'm wretched, absolutely miserable." "What's the matter?" Why, I predicted that Gallagher couldn't live anyway and here he's gone and got well. No, I haven't any personal feeling that I want Gallagher to die, but there's my reputation ruined."

There are millions of pins used every hour, and the wonder is what becomes of them. As we shiver over the stove to-day, we wish now that one might have been arranged in the lap of spring before winter sat down on it.

Spoopendyke Builds a Hen Coop.

"My dear," said Mr. Spoopendyke, as he appeared before his wife with a broad grin on his face; "say, my dear, I've bought some chickens so we can have fresh laid eggs. Look!" and he held out a couple of pair of fowls tied by the legs for Mrs. Spoopendyke's contemplation.

"Well, upon my word!" exclaimed Mrs. Spoopendyke. "Of all things? Chickens! Ever since we've been married I've wanted chickens!" and she approached the birds cautiously and with a look of misgiving that belied her word; "where will we keep them?"

"In a coop, Mrs. Spoopendyke, in a coop!" retorted her husband, laying the chickens on the bed while he divested himself of his coat and vest. "We might keep 'em up the chimney or in the clock, but we probably won't. We'll just keep 'em in a hen coop, and I've got the lathe and nails down stairs to build it with. Come down in the yard," and Mr. Spoopendyke grabbed his new acquisitions by the legs and started off, followed by his wife.

"Do you know how to build a coop?" asked Mrs. Spoopendyke, as she watched her husband dig a hole for a post in the corner she had reserved for a geranium bed.

"If I don't, you probably do," snorted Mr. Spoopendyke, kicking away at the spade until he loosened his leg.

"Now I put this post here and one there. Then the two fences make the rest, and I only lath up these two—dod gast the post!" he concluded, as it toppled over on his ear.

"Can't you hold it up? What're you sitting around there like a cork in a jug for? Hold it up, will ye?"

Mrs. Spoopendyke grasped at the post firmly with both hands and held it at an angle of thirty degrees.

"Now hold it perfectly still while I dig the other hole," and Mr. Spoopendyke hacked away at the ground again and set his second post.

"I see what you mean," giggled Mrs. Spoopendyke. "You slat it up from one post to the other and then put the chickens in. My! how nice that'll be!"

Mr. Spoopendyke glared at her a moment and then began putting on his laths, standing between the posts and the fence corner and whistling as he worked.

"Now," said he, as he finished, "what do you think of that?"

"Mrs. Spoopendyke examined the job critically."

"It's a perfect palace!" she exclaimed. "But say, dear, how how are you going to get out?"

"Yah-h-h!" roared Spoopendyke, bounding into the air. "Why didn't ye tell me? What'd ye want to let me build myself in like a dod gasted mummy for? Ain't ye got any sense at all anywheres! Why didn't ye watch what I was doing?" and Spoopendyke grinned horribly through the slats.

"I supposed you were going to build a hole in it," faltered Mrs. Spoopendyke.

"So I am," yelled Spoopendyke, jamming his leg through the structure. "Want any more holes?" and he kicked the side half way across the yard. "Four chickens, four holes," and the laths flew in an all directions 'Want any more holes' and he smashed the roof out with the spade. "Holes constantly on hand! If you don't see the hole you want, ask for it!" and he blew out the end with terrific energy. New goods coming all the time! Second hand holes a specialty!" and he banged out the other end. "Parties wanting holes to send to the country will consult their interests by applying here before going elsewhere!" and he ripped down the rest of the coop with a prodigious clatter "Want any more holes in this particular coop?" he roared, tearing out the posts and slamming them across the yard. "Does this hen coop begin to convey the impression of having a hole in it?" he demanded of his wife.

"Yes, dear," replied Mrs. Spoopendyke, soothingly. "I'm so glad you got out, but where can we keep the chickens now?"

"Keep 'em?" replied Spoopendyke with a horrible grimace, and grasping the wretched fowls by the legs, "who's going to keep 'em?" and he cut the lashings. "S'pose I'm going to run my business just to gratify every measly whim of a dod gasted woman?" and he tossed the chickens into the air.

"Never mind," cooed Mrs. Spoopenkyke, as the last bird slid over the fence and disappeared. "Chickens are a nuisance, anyway. We really don't need any."

"Why didn't you say so before I bought 'em?" blurted Spoopendyke, as he dashed into the house.

"I didn't know it," sighed Mrs. S. looking around on the wreck, "and, beside, I don't believe we would have had many eggs, because those chickens were all roosters."

And Mrs. Spoopendyke followed her husband into the house, who stormed around the rest of the evening because she couldn't find the Eagle of January 12, 1879, which he had cautioned her to save because there was something in he wanted to read, and which he had used the next day, in conjunction with the back breadth of her new flannel petticoat, to clean his shotgun with.

Taken at His Word.

A Maine grocer who had just "experienced religion" acknowledged in meeting that he had been a hard sinner, cheated customers by adulterating his goods, but being converted, would repay any one he had wronged. Late that night he was awakened by a ring at his door-bell. Looking out he saw a man.

"Who are you and what do you want?" he asked. "I'm Bill Jones. You said to-night you would repay those you had cheated. Give me that $100 you've owed me so long." "Can't you wait till morning?" "No; I ain't going to wait till then and stand in line all day." He was paid.

Too late for the fair—an old bachelor.

The Sunflower Rage.

"Have you, ahem, any, ah, any sunflower seeds?" asked a young lady timidly of a dealer in garden seeds the other day.

"Yes, madam, plenty," answered the young man in such a business-like way as to relieve the young lady's mind of any idea that it was a matter for ridicule. "Which do you want, the small or the large?" he asked with a pleasant smile, as he placed before her several small square envelopes filled with the seed. The lady took two packages, for which she paid 30 cents and departed.

"Do you sell much of that seed?" asked the reporter.

"Do we sell much of it? Well, now I guess. I never saw such a demand for one particular kind of flower seed since I've been in the business as there is this spring for sunflowers. There wont be a back yard in New York from Mott street to Harlem that wont have its clump of growing sunflowers this summer judging from the demand there is for seed."

"And this is due to the æsthetic movement?"

"Why, cer—. Yes, of course; if it hadn't been for Oscar, sunflower seeds would be as they have been for years, a drug in the market. People may talk as they like, but he has been the means of causing money to flow through a good many channels, and the seeds-men's turn to thank his advent has arrived."

"Is the flower a difficult one to raise?"

"Why, bless you, no. It is the easiest of any. It requires no care, and will grow rapidly anywhere where there is plenty of sun."

"What have the seeds been used for heretofore?" the reporter asked.

"Oscar Wilde says in his lecture that the impression that the sunflower is used as an æsthetic diet is erroneous—he is mistaken. In Portugal meal is made from the seeds, from which bread is made; and when roasted they make an excellent substitute for coffee. The seed in its natural state is eagerly sought for by birds, and in the country sunflowers are raised for the seeds, which are used in large quantities for chicken food. It is very fattening, so if you are served with lean chickens at your country boarding-house this summer you may thank Mr. Wilde and the more important demand he has created for the seed as a feast for the eyes. The seed contains a great quantity of oil, which is fit for burning in lamps and which is in some European countries made into a good substitute for olive oil. There wont be a garden or door-yard in Newport, Saratoga, or any of the principal watering places that wont have its Helianthus annus, tuberosus or multiflorus this summer," said the young man as he was called away to weigh out a half a pound of cabbage-seed.

Jay Gould.

The country is full of the doings of this great little man. Personally he is one of the poorest specimens of the genus homo one would see in a day's journey on the streets of a large city. He is not much over five feet two inches in height, and weighs about one hundred pounds. He is a sickly man, always taking medicine. He is unimpressive in manner, and has a dazed, shamed look, as if he dreaded criticism. He is dark, swarthy, and his face has a Jewish cast. He was called on to speak recently at a railroad meeting in Boston, but he simpered and stammered like a schoolboy. He could only utter a few words when he sat down confused. Yet this little, feeble, sickly looking fellow is one of the most daring speculators of the age, and the most wonderful manipulator of stocks known to the history of Wall street. He controls property estimated to be worth $400,000,000. Nobody, not even himself, can tell how much he is personally worth. But the disposition is always to exaggerate the fortunes of operators. In addition to his gigantic railway enterprise, the man owns the telegraphic system of the country, and through it has the press of the whole nation by the throat.

The Blizzard of the Barrel.

The East End Gazette thus moralizes: Here we have a glass of bock-beer, a May day hair raiser. It is called bock because when you drink about six glasses you think you have swallowed a windmill and a circular saw in full motion. Bock is German for billy-goat, but what business a billy-goat has to do with a beer glass we cannot imagine. Bock beer is fomented in a brewery, and the man who drinks it pays five cents a glass for the foam and gets a thimble full of beer at the bottom of the glass thrown in. The whole thing is about as tangible as a cloud with a fringe of embroidered sunshine. Besides, if a man drinks too much and gets noisy he is thrown out, and the chances are that in a short time he is thrown into a graveyard and eventually goes to a resort below where even beer comes high. Therefore, we say, look not upon the bock when it is young and frisky or when it is old and bald-headed. It always manages to get the best of you in the end.

Love in Connecticut: "Then you are paying attention to old Grinder's daughter, are you, my son?" "Yes, mother; I have waited upon Miss Grinder somewhat. She's a nice sort of a girl. Father's got money." "Precious little good that'll do you, my son. He's the closest man in these part." "But you know, mother, he can't live forever, and—" "Don't you be too sure. I've known old Grinder for forty years, and he hasn't died yet." This set the young man to thinking.

"My wife won't even hear of my going to the theatre with another lady," said Johnson. Ragbag didn't seem to construe Johnson's remark aright, for he said, "Won't eh? Don't be too sure of it. I thought my wife wouldn't, but she did, and I had a fearful time about it."

In Drills or Hills.

The planting of corn in drills is getting to be much more frequent than formerly, because of the increased yield. The usual plan is to put the grains about a foot apart, or two grains every twenty-six inches. The main objection urged against the drill is that the weeds are harder to keep down than when worked both ways, as in hill planting. We have tried both plans and prefer the drill. The yield is great, it requires less labor to do the planting, and the general work is no more than by the old method. To keep clean, star the cultivator early, working wel up to the rows, and as the weed start between the corn, they can easily be covered by the harrow. If the weeds should at any time get too much of a start to be entirely eradicated by the cultivator, as they do when the proper attention has not been given, and this often occurs no matter how planted, a resort may be the shovel plow, which does the work completely and in any event is a most excellent machine for corn working. The cost of this plow is only five dollars. We planted in drills last year and succeeded in having one of the cleanest fields of corn there was in the county and notwithstanding the drouth the crop was a good one. We drilled two grains every 26 inches, first marking out the rows and then following with the drill.

Matthew Hale Smith was writing letters to the Journal over the signature of "Burleigh." Smith wrote a detestable hand, and Charles O. Rogers, who was then making the Journal jump with his activity, enterprise and liberality, was very nearly his match in this particular. One day a compositor came down to Mr. Rogers with some of Burleigh's "copy," saying that if he had got to set that sort of stuff they'd have to pay him by the hour, because he couldn't make his salt setting by the thousand. Rogers immediately wrote Burleigh a note, telling him that if he couldn't write so that his letters could be read, he had better either quit writing or get somebody to do his writing for him. In a day or two there arrived an envelope with Rogers' signature cut out from the letter and pasted upon it, and "care of Boston Journal" written beneath. Upon being opened it read as follows: "Dear sir: I have received a letter which, from the printed heading, I assume to be from the Journal office. If you will get somebody that can write a legible hand to inform me whom it is from and what it is all about, I shall esteem it a favor. Yours truly, Matthew Hale Smith." The next time Mr. Smith came to Boston he was handsomely entertained, and Charlie Rogers paid the bills.—Christian at Work.

An Appalling Thought.

During the second year of the war a grocer in an Ohio town sealed his prices by reports from the front. One day a defeat would cut the price of butter four cents, the next day a victory would raise the price of eggs a penny a dozen, and victory or defeat was certain to hit even the jar of nutmegs on the top shelf. One day a farmer who had some butter to sell entered the store and asked the going price. "I'm paying sixteen to-day was the answer. "But only two days ago you paid twenty." "Yes, but you see Pope has been defeated since that, and there is a back action." The farmer sold out and wanted the most of it in sugar, and the grocer remarked as he made ready to weigh it: "Sugar has advanced a cent a pound since Monday." "Mercy on me! how is that?" "Because the rebels got licked in Tennessee." The old man sat down on a nail keg and thought it all over, and presently looked up and said: "My friend, if a Federal defeat cheapens what you buy, and a rebel victory enhances the value of what you sell, what a h — of a fix you'd be in if there should happen to be a drawn battle."

Mrs. Langtry

Mrs. Langtry gave two morning performances of "She Stoops to Conquer" at the Standard theatre in London a few days since. The East-end theatre was so crowded that the musicians had to give up their seats in the orchestra and to play from the stage. When the performance was over, there was so large a crowd to see Mrs. Langtry issue from the stage door that the entire street was filled. Mrs. Langtry has commenced her provincial tour, and is performing in "An Unequal Match." Her part in this piece makes stronger calls upon dramatic ability than any she has heretofore played. In the first act, in which she is a poor country girl, she wears a flowered cotton dress, tucked up over a red petticoat, with a white apron and neckerchief; in the second she has a pale turquoise blue dress, of soft material, made up in innumerable plaitings, loopings, and frillings, and trimmed with cream lace; and in the third an elaborate gray silk dress, trimmed with "steel jet," which looks like the scales of a silver fish.

A London literary critic says there is too much "simpering flirtation" in American novels, the authors "being too much occupied with "young girls," as they are called." Well, the English novelist is too much occupied with maiden aunts and grandmothers, as they are called, and the American writer has the best of it by a large majority, with several "young girl" precincts to hear from.

Disease is an effect, not a cause. Its origin is within; its manifestations are without. Hence, to cure the disease the Cause must be removed, and in no other way can a cure be effected. WARNER'S SAFE KIDNEY AND LIVER CURE is established on just principles. It realizes that of all diseases arise from deranged kidneys and liver, and it strikes at once at the root of the difficulty. The elements of which it is composed act directly upon these great organs, both as a food and restorer, and by placing them in a healthy condition, drive disease and pain from the system.

For the innumerable troubles caused by unhealthy Kidneys, Liver and Urinary Organs; for the distressing Disorders of Women; for Malaria, and for physical derangements generally, this great remedy has no equal. Beware of imposters, imitations and concoctions said to be just as good.

I have tried everything recommended, have taken the prescriptions of a dozen physicians, but got no relief until I took Brown's Iron Bitters. I feel none of the old troubles, and am a new man. I am getting much stronger, and feel first-rate. I am a railroad engineer, and now make my trips regularly. I can not say too much in praise of your wonderful medicine. D. C. MACK.

DOWNS' ELIXIR.

Vegetable Balsamic
ELIXIR

This valuable medicine is purely vegetable: the discovery of which was the result of many years' close study, in order to discover the cause, the symptoms, and the cure—viz:

Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Catarrh, Croup, Asthma, Pleurisy, Hoarseness, Influenza, Spitting Blood, Bronchitis, and every species of oppression of the Chest and Lungs. In all cases where this Elixir has been duly administered its efficacy has been invariably manifested, convincing the most incredulous that is not incurable, if properly attended to.—Consumption, at its commencement, is but a slight irritation of the membrane which covers the Lungs; then an inflamation, when the cough is more observable, but rather dry; then becomes local fever and the pulse more frequent, the cheeks flushed and chills more common. This Elixir in curing the above complaints, operates so as to remove all morbid irritations and inflamation from the lungs to the surface, and finally expel them from the system. It facilitates expectoration.

It heals the ulcerated surfaces and relieves the cough and makes the breathing easy. It supports the strength and at the same time reduces the fever. It is free from strong opiate and astringent articles, which are of so drying a nature as to be in great danger of destroying the patient; whereas this medicine never dries or stops the cough, but, by removing the cause, generally destroys the hectic before the cough is entirely gone. Consequently, when the cough is cured the patient is well. Send address for pamphlet giving full directions for cure of pulmonary diseases.

Price 35 cts., 50 cts., and $1.00 per bottle.

Guiteau in Jail.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—District Attorney Corkhill, in speaking of the Guiteau case to a Star reporter to-day, said that there was but one move which Mr. Reed could make before the courts, and that was to apply for a write of habeas corpus. He said that no court could grant a writ of dulunatico inquirendo as had been suggested might be done. Guiteau's appearance has changed considerably within a few weeks. He has lost color and his beard has been allowed to grow. Just now he seems to put his entire dependence upon Mr. Reed, his counsel, and he seems to be confident that Mr. Reed will succeed in securing a respite and perhaps a commutation of sentence. But like Mr. Reed he is reticent as to what the next move will be. He never mentions the name of Scoville and seems to have dismissed his relatives from his mind. Judging from the remarks made by visitors to the jail and the tenor of the letters and cards which come to the prisoner the feeling against him appears to be on the increase, rather than becoming intensified.

The Boom Full.

WILLIAMSPORT, May 29.—The recent floods in the river have been the means of bringing all the logs that remained in the lateral streams and were lodged along the shores down to the boom, and the lumber manufacturers now have a sufficiency of stock on hand to keep their mills running all summer. To-day the last "drive," which is cleaning the shores, bars and islands of all logs, reached this city. This is the first time in many years that such a clean sweep has been made in bringing logs down the river. The main boom is almost full, the bridge boom about half full and Linden boom entirely full. The total stock of logs on hand will exceed 100,000,000 feet. The lumber trade is reported in very good condition, and, although there was 157,536,838 feet of pine on hand at the beginning of the present year, the demand has been such as to keep the stock well down, as there is no indication of a weakening in price at the present time.

Foul Play.

MATAMORAS, Pa., May 25.—Mrs. Daniel Cuddeby, of Stairway, Pa., on Sunday last started to walk to Port Jarvis, N. Y., on the towpath of the Delaware and Hudson canal, to take the train for New York. Her husband, who is lame, accompanied her part of the way and returned, leaving her to proceed alone. The body of Mrs. Cuddeby has since been found in the Delaware and Hudson canal, near Maugaup, by boatmen, who first found her shawl floating. She had with her when she parted from her husband a small satchel containing about forty dollars. This cannot be found now and it is suspected that Mrs. Cuddeby has been foully dealt with, though there are no marks of violence on her body.

Chairman Cooper.

PHILADELPHIA, May 29.—Chairman Cooper, in compliance with a resolution of the republican state committee, to-day issued the following call for a state convention: "The delegates elected to the republican state convention held at Harrisburg on May 10 will reconvene at Harrisburg on Wednesday, June 21, 1882, at 12 o'clock a. m., for the purpose of nominating a candidate for congressman-at-large."

Probable Suicide.

BELMONT, Ont., May 25.—The body of a young man supposed to be Odel Andrews, of London, was found last evening on the roadside four miles from this place with throat cut from ear to ear. It is supposed that he committed suicide while laboring under a fit of insanity. A razor was found close beside the body.

The Republican Caucus.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—The republican caucus this evening was largely attended. Previous to the caucus a number of republicans were disposed to doubt the expediency of the policy which the party had adopted and several of them intimated that they were not in favor of continuing the existing status—in short that the time had come when some sort of compromise might properly be made. After the members of the election committee had been heard, however, in explanation and vindication of their action this feeling of doubt seemed to disappear, and as the debate progressed some of those who at the outset had seemed disposed to be conservative took ground with the most radical in urging a strict adherence to the present policy. Mr. Hubbell, of Michigan, counseled conservative action and thought before the party proceeded further in the contest they should be sure of satisfying the country that their action was justifiable. The chairman of the election committee made an argument in support of the stand taken by the republicans and claimed that the committee had made a complete examination of the Mackey-Dibble case and the committee's report was thoroughly justifiable. Miller (Pennsylvania) and Ramsey (Massachusetts), members of the committee, also supported the decision of the committee. Robeson spoke several times and strongly recommended presistance in the policy heretofore pursued. After speeches by various other leading members resolutions were adopted declaring that the republicans were satisfied with the allegation make by Mr. Dibble as to forgery and falsified evidence had been fully considered by the committee on elections and the cause now coming before the house should be fully and freely discussed by that body. It was agreed that the following proposition be submitted: That the house immediately proceed to a consideration of the case and after six hour's discussion the house shall vote on the question of recommittal by yea and nay vote and if the house shall decide this in the negative it shall thereupon continue to consider the case until it be finished without dilatory motions. The caucus then adjourned.

Crushed in a Church.

LANCASTER, May 28.—A terrible accident, resulting in the death of three men and the maiming of several others, occurred about 9 o'clock yesterday morning at Stern's meeting house, situated in Rapho township, about four miles north of the borough of Mount Joy, in this county. The religious sect known as Dunkard's were about raising the framework of a new meeting house, and the "raising," as is usual on such occasions, attracted a large crowd, some of whom were there to assist and others as lookers-on. The framework of the first story was got into position without accident, but in putting up the timbers of the second story some of the lower timbers gave way and the whole structure fell with a crash, burying beneath the ruins not less than fifty men, a dozen of whom were much injured, some of them fatally. The following named have died of their injuries: John Shenk, widower, aged about 50 years; Samuel Witmoyer, aged 50 years.

The Tariff Commission.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—The members of the tariff commission, so far as they were agreed upon at the cabinet meeting to-day, are John S. Hayes, of Massachusetts; Henry W. Oliver, of Pennsylvania; A. M. Garland, of Illinois; Robert P. Porter, of the District of Columbia; Alexander Mitchell, of Wisconsin, and James Chestnut, Jr., of South Carolina. The list will probably be completed by the selection of William A. Wheeler, of New York, who, if nominated, will be chairman of the commission, and J. A. Amble, of Ohio. The names of the commissioners will be sent to the senate early next week.

Supposed Murder.

CHICAGO, May 26.—At Highwood, a northern suburb, this morning the house of a man named McCarty was discovered to have been burned, and his body found lying in the ashes. The indications point to murder, and the object is supposed to be the money he derived recently from the sale of stock. Nobody knew of the affair until daylight, when the smoking ruins attracted attention, and the charred remains were found. A posse of citizens is scouring the county round about, and every effort is being made to overtake the murderers.

A Strike Ended.

CHICAGO, May 26.—Dispatches received from Muskegon, Mich., this afternoon, announce that the strike at that place has ended. At a meeting of the strikers this morning it was voted by a majority of 45 to declare the strike ended and that all who wished might resume work. The strikers returned at two dollars per day of eleven hours, a less price than was offered them by the boom company a month ago. There will be a full force at work to-morrow and all the mills will start next week.

Emerson's Will.

BOSTON, May 28.—The will of Ralph Waldo Emerson contains no public bequests but gives the property to his wife and children. James Eliot Cabot is appointed literary executor to act in co-operation with Mr. Emerson's children. E. W. Emerson and W. H. Forbes are appointed executors of the will.

Home at Last.

NEW YORK, May 28.—The steamer Celtic with four survivors of the Jeannette expedition, Lieutenant Danenhower, Dr. Newton Newcombe, Charles Ton Sing, and Jack Cole, was signaled this morning and a steamer with their friends went down the bay to meet her. The meeting between Lieutenant Danenhower and his parents was very affecting. After congratulations, the lieutenant conducted his weeping parents to his cabin where he introduced them to his fellow passengers. The party remained aboard the Celtic listening to the recital of the dreadful sufferings in the far north and the sorrowful tale of the fate of Commander De Long and his men until the steamer reached her dock, where Lieutenant Danenhower was surrounded by congratulating friends who had gathered in anticipation of his coming to give him a hearty welcome. For an hour he was engaged in shaking hands and answering personal inquiries.

While this was going on upon the upper deck a far different scene was presented in a small cabin below. There with arms pinioned behind him was poor Jack Cole, boatswain of the Jeannette. His brother, Thomas and his son, John, were soon with him and the unfortunate immediately recognized them, affectionately greeting both, but immediately after speaking to his son his mind again wandered and he seemed to be far away, struggling in the ice in the bitter fate that threatened him. He will be sent to an asylum. Lieutenant Danenhower is confident that proper treatment will restore him in a few months. It was necessary to bind him, as the slightest thing made bim frantic.

Congressman-at-Large.

PHILADELPHIA, May 28.—A caucus of the Philadelphia delegation to the late Republican State convention at Harrisburg has been called to met tomorrow evening for the purpose of uniting on a Philadelphia business man for Congressman at large. It is understood that the delegation will be unanimous for John Wanamaker and that he will be nominated by the convention. Senator Cameron and State Senator Norris called on Wanamaker on Saturday and appealed to him to accept the nomination. Wanamaker indicated the possibility of his acceptance if nominated by the convention. In a day or two the committee will issue a call for the reassembling of the old convention at Harrisburg.

Seriously Injured.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—Hon. Russell Errett, of Pennsylvania, met with quite a serious accident this morning by being thrown from a Herdic coach. He was about alighting from the coach at the entrance to the house when the driver started the horse suddenly, causing Mr. Errett to lose his balance, and he was thrown head first against the granite steps under the archway, receiving a very severe cut across the nose and cheeks. It is thought his nose is broken. Mr. Errett is lying in the room of the ways and means committee. A physician has been summoned.

A Double Tragedy.

CHICAGO, May 28.—A Salt Lake, Utah, special says: John Smith, an old California ranchman, living near Milford, two hundred miles southwest of here, quarreled with his wife and seizing a double-barreled shotgun fired at her twice, both charges taking effect. He then coolly reloaded the weapon, went out of the door, fastened a string to the trigger and placing the muzzle against his breast fired six navy bullets into his body. He died two hours afterwards. A married daughter witnessed the tragedy. The old man was subject to fits of lunacy.

Mass Meeting of Workingmen.

CLEVELAND, Ohio., May 26.—Two thousand workingmen held an open air mass meeting to-day, including 1,200 men formerly employed by the Cleveland rolling mill company. Speeches were made in English, Polish, and Bohemian. The speakers encouraged the rolling mill men to remain out: assured them of assistance, moral and material, and cited the Milwaukee cigar makers on a strike since last November supported by the union and will be five years longer if necessary.

The Dead-lock Unbroken.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—There was no business of special importance transacted in the house to-day. At the night session there was a larger attendance of members than is usually secured at evening sessions. There was not a quorum of republicans present, however, and on a motion to adjourn until Monday the republicans received only 118 votes. Subsequently, on a motion of Mr. Calkins, the house at 10 o'clock adjourned until to-morrow.

The Changes in Egypt.

LONDON, May 28.—The correspondent of the Times at Alexandria asserts that the resignation of the ministry was in consequence of an order from the port. Cherif Pasha will form a new ministry. There are great rejoicings over the turn affairs have taken, as the exodus of Europeans had stopped business; but some fears are expressed that the porte will press the policy of reducing Egypt to the condition of a Turkish province.

George A. Conly Drowned.

KEENE, N. H. May 27.—George A. Conly and Herman Ritzell, members of the Kellogg Concert company, were drowned at Spofford lake, Chesterfield, Friday night. The bodies have not been recovered.

TUSCAN, Arizona, May 25.—A recent number of the daily Citizen published certain letters of C. D. Pastor and criticised him sharply. This morning Pastor met J. A. Whitmore, the editor of the Citizen, and without saying a word drew a revolver and fired, but missed his mark. Pastor was arrested.

TROY, N. Y., May 26.—An infernal machine containing powder and fuse was found on the porch of the office of the Weekly News at Warrensburg, Warren county. An inscription on the machine warned the editor to leave the town. He had offended some one by the utterance of temperance principles.

LANCASTER, Pa., May 28.—Alexander Lemans was arrested in this city late last night while in the act of setting fire to a frame building. There were three similar attempts at incendiarism last night all traceable to Lemans' gang, whose arrest it is expected will lead to the capture of the remaining incendiaries.

LONDON, May 25.—At the epsom summer meeting to day the race for the Royal stakes was won by Lord Bradford's 4-year-old bay colt, Limestone. Lord Hasting's 3-year old chestnut filly, Silver Bell, was second and Lord Rossmore's (formerly Mr. Lorillard's) 4 year-old bay colt, Passaic, third. Eleven horses ran.

PHILADELPHIA, May 25.—Senator Cameron was a guest at the monthly dinner of the Farmers' club given this evening at the country residence of President Roberts, of the Pennsylvania railroad, near Mercer station. It is expected that the Senator will have a conference with Chairman Cooper and other political leaders tomorrow in regard to the split in the party.

WILMINGTON, May 25.—The greenback state convention, numbering only five delegates, all from Susser county, met here to-day. John G. Jackson, of Hockessin, was nominated for Governor, and J. Albert Whittock, editor of the Newcastle Star, for congressmen. The greenback vote in the state is very light.

A Six-Year-Old Boy Lost and Found.

Considerable excitement existed in town on Friday afternoon over the fact that a bright, little six-year-old boy was lost and a diligent search continued several hours throughout the town failed to reveal his whereabouts.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Neideigh, of College township, the parents of the little boy, came to town at an early hour to make some purchases, bringing him along. They visited several stores during the day, and among them that of the Joseph Brothers, on Allegheny street, at about 2 o'clock p. m. While there they separated, the mother going upstairs to make some purchases and the father going to the basement for a similar purpose, leaving the child in the main store room on the first floor. The little fellow, not noticing in which direction his parents had gone, supposed they had left the store and started after them. His first impulse was to start out the Buffalo Run road in search of his grandfather, who resides about twelve miles away from town. The little fellow started on his long journey, inquiring of those he met on the way where his grandfather's house was.

Meanwhile the parents, assisted by Burgess Powers, the police, and others who felt an interest in the little fellow's welfare, instituted a thorough search. Suspicions of kidnapping were freely indulged in. The search was continued until 5 o'clock, when Mr Neideigh started to his home, to see if any tidings of the child could be learned in that direction. We understand that he went all the way home, a distance of fifteen miles, and was on his way back by the Buffalo Run road when, about six and a-half miles from town, he found his little son still trudging along the road towards "grandpa's," It was after 7 o'clock when the little fellow was found. He was brought to town and restored to his mother. Great was the joy of both parents over the happy ending of what might have been a very sad event.

—Thirty-one tourists are on their way around the world in a steam yacht. They started from England in October, and reached San Francisco about a week ago, having visited the Mediterranean ports and the Pacific islands. The entire trip will last ten months. The passengers are of both sexes, and each pays $2,500, for which they enjoy excellent fare, the use of a steam launch while in harbors, a band of music aboard, good medical attendance and a large library. About the 5th of August they will enter the Chesapeake Bay, thence sail up the Susquehanna to Lock Haven, and come by rail to Bellefonte. While in England they heard rumors of the model grocery store of Sechler in this place, and they regarded it as the most important object of interest in all their long trip. They will either carry Sechler away with them to start a similar store in England, or they will study into all his operations so carefully as to be able to duplicate it. We hope they will pursue the latter course, as it will be impossible for the citizens of Centre county to get along without Sechler. His groceries are of the best quality and have gained a world-wide reputation.

—An accident happened at the Tyrone yards Friday evening just before dark. Sanford Sassman, an employe of the railroad company, jumped upon the steps of an engine to ride home, when a train of cars dropping down struck the engine with such force as to knock him under the wheels. He was dragged a short distance and badly crushed and lived but forty minutes after the accident happened. Mr. Sassman had lately returned from a pleasure trip through the West, was the only support of an aged mother, was an industrious, much beloved young man and will be sadly missed by his relatives and friends. Much sympathy is felt for the aged mother in this terrible bereavement.

—A man deposited $10 in the bank last week, which he saved by economizing and purchasing groceries of Sechler.

A Frightful Runaway.

At a late hour on Wednesday night a disastrous runaway occurred on the road between Bellefonte and Roopsburg. A young man was driving two horses—one owned by Mr. Baum and the other by Mr. McCulley. What frightened the animals we do not know, but in their flight they went over an embankment a distance of twenty-five feet, dragging the vehicle behind them. Both horses were seriously injured and the vehicle is a total wreck.

The first law of nature is self preservation; but to do it she needs Peruna.

—Those of our readers desiring horticultural products for garden or lawn decoration should order of Mr. Harry Chaapel, the Williamsport florist and seedsman. We have received from him a very fine collection of plants, including some of the choicest and most beautiful varieties grown, all received in good condition, and recommend his establishment to all desiring anything in this line. Mr. Chaapel is an accommodating gentleman, thoroughly understands his business and all orders forwarded to his house will receive proper attention.

—Lay aside your old winter hat and don one suitable for summer wear. It will not cost much and will be vastly more comfortable. Valentines' store is the place to buy them. They have a large and elegant stock at very reasonable prices, including all kinds of summer hats, among which are some very pretty light and colored straws. The tastes of every customer may be satisfied. m26-d3t&w3t.

—Married folks would be happier if they kissed and made up after a quarrel ; if the household expenses were proportioned to receipts ; if they tried to be as agreeable as in courtship days ; if each would try to be a support and comfort to the other ; if each remembered the other was a human, not an angel ; if women were as kind to their husbands as they are to their lovers ; if fuel and provisions were laid in during the high tide of summer ; if both parties remembered that they were married for worse as well as for better ; if men were as thoughtful for their wives as they were for their sweethearts. We could enumerate a hundred other things which would make married folks happier, but the most important is to buy all their groceries at Sechler's store. Without this perfect happiness is well-nigh impossible ; with it bliss is certain. Sechler's famous store is located on High street in the Bush House block.

—Dr. Fisher, of Zion, relates an interesting story, which, however, the majority of hearers do not accept without the accompaniment of a few grains of salt. He says that a short time ago one of his pigs fell into a cistern containing about three feet of water, and there his pigship stood for a full week, and when discovered was as hale and hearty as Centre county pigs usually are. It is difficult for people to believe that a submersion for a week in three feet of water will not drown the best pig in existence, especially when the animal can obtain no food. Perhaps that pig is part fish—the story. at least. seems to be "fishy."

—We are informed that the Bartholomew heirs, many of whom reside in this county, have heard from the committee who went to Germany to look after their fortune. The committee report that the fortune is a sure thing and that the money will soon be forthcoming.

Your duty is to keep from getting sick, if you can. With Peruna you can.

—Mr. Harvey McClure is putting a new roof on his Bishop street residence.

Debilitated persons, and sufferers from wasting diseases such as consumption, scrofula, kidney affections, will be greatly benefitted by using Brown's Iron Bitters.

—Exchanges are remarking that strawberry short cake will soon be in order. To our mind it is nearest being 'in order' when it is smoking hot on the table.

Clear head and voice, easy breathing, sweet breath, perfect smell, taste and hearing, no cough, no distress. These are conditions brought about in catarrh by the use of Sanford's Radical Cure. Complete treatment for $1.

Now is the time to buy in what stock of dress goods, clothing, boots and shoes, etc., you need for this coming year, as Lyon Co. are closing out their stock at cost. The goods must be sold and prices will be slaughtered.

Frank Blair has just opened another fine lot of solid silver ware, from the Gorham Co., which are put up in handsome satin cases. These goods, in connection with his stock of superior silver-plated ware, where the finest display of silver ware ever exhibited in town. Marshall Declines.

PHILADELPHIA, May 23.—The following letter explains itself:

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 22, 1882.—To Hon. George Lear.—My Dear Sir: The kind and eulogistic language of your letter conveying the official notice of my unanimous nomination for congressman at large by the republican state convention can be appreciated as the exuberant warmth of personal friendship. It would have been a man of stolid temperament, who could be insensible to the enthusiastic reception accorded to the nomination. It was the result of passionate excitement rather than the calm judgment of a deliberate body. The tender of the position which would have enabled me to appear before the people of the commonwealth and demand a literal observance of the fulfilment of the letter and spirit of the platform adopted by the convention, was a strong temptation toward an acceptance of the trust. The profession of faith therein set forth in my judgment embodies sound political doctrine and practice and is in accord with the patriotic wishes of the people. It would have afforded me satisfaction to enforce and maintain the proposition that public trusts should be administered with the same scrupulous fealty as private trusts; that no diversion from the original purpose should be permitted. It is a mockery of common business sense to displace tried and faithful public servants in order to provide places for hungry applicants who may prove as worthless as they are voracious. No sane man so acts in his private affairs. It is equally repugnant to sound economy in the administration of public interests. The use of public patronage to control or direct the people in their choice of candidates for office is a grave political crime It subverts the principles of representative government and tends to make of the servant a master, to the common debasement of the people. To have aided in some degree in calling attention to these vital questions of the hour would have ever been my duty as a nominee. The great moral and political ideas which called the republican party into existence have now become imbedded in the organic law of the land. If it is the mission of the present party organization to go forward in the spirit of the platform it should succeed. If it fails to come up to the full measure of its promise it should perish. Mere party obligations sit very lightly on my shoulders. The call upon me for party service was a genuine surprise, one not likely to be repeated in a lifetime. It came unsought and should not be declined without adequate and commanding reasons. Such exist in my case. Personal and private duties in which the public take no interest demand that all my energies be devoted to their fulfilment. Therefore I must decline the proffered position. To say that I do so with great reluctance but faintly expresses the fact. A lifetime has been devoted to the advocacy of those principles which constituted the grand era and glory of the republican triumph. That triumph was accomplished at a priceless cost. May the inheritors of the name and organization prove themselves worthy to administer the future of the party.

Sincerely your friend,
THOMAS M. MARSHALL.

A Terrific Tornado.

CHICAGO, May 23.—A Hot Springs special says: Reports of the destruction by a terrific tornado last week in Polk county are just coming in by mail. The residence of Mr. Turner, at Iron Forks, was demolished, two children killed, Mr. Turner badly and his wife fatally injured. In escaping some of the inmates had their clothes torn from their backs. Dr. McDaniels' residence was torn to pieces and his wife seriously if not fatally hurt. The entire family of Scott Lindsey was badly hurt, and Mrs. James Davis, a visitor, probably fatally injured. Mr. Barber lost every building on his farm, and Mr. McKnight's residence was destroyed, the occupants escaping. Joseph Pepper's little daughter was killed. Mr. Holmes and wife were fatally injured. The Baptist church at Gardners was destroyed. It is estimated that fifty farms were devastated, and the destruction in the county never had a precedent. The damage is not less than $180,000 in Icile and Polk counties.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., May 23.—Reports of a terrific tornado last week in Polk county are coming in by mail. Besides the destruction of the Turner homestead and the killing of the two children, several lives were lost.

Betting on the Derby.

LONDON, May 22.—In the betting on the race for the Derby stakes Mr. Lorillard's brown colt Gerald has declined to 25 to 2 offered against him after 11 to 1 had been taken. The betting against his chestnut cold Sachem has advanced to 16 to 1. Sachem and Gerald coupled sell at 9 against 1.

Senator Hill Improving.

EUREKA SPRINGS, Ark., May 24.—The health of Senator Hill, of Georgia, who has been here for several weeks, is much improved and his physicians say there is strong hope of a cure or at least that his life will be greatly prolonged.

Points in Politics.

PHILADELPHIA, May 24.—George Lear, who presided at the regular republican convention, occupied a seat on the platform when the independent republican convention was called to order. Prayer was offered by Rev. D. C. Babcock, a noted prohibitionist and secretary of the Pennsylvania state temperance association. United States Senator Mitchell was chosen temporary chairman by acclamation, amid cheers and applause.

Charles S. Wolf was chosen chairman of the committee on permanent organization, and Senator Stewart chairman of the committee on resolutions.

H. L. Foster was made permanent chairman, with one vice president from each senatorial district.

Nominations for the state ticket being declared in order Major Merrick said he desired to be a private in the fight and desired no place on the ticket, Major Merrick closed by nominating for governor Chief Justice Agnew.

Dr. Doane nominated Senator John Stewart. Hon. Wayne MacVeagh's name was proposed, but withdrawn after several delegates declared that MacVeagh would not accept.

The nominations closed and the convention adjourned for an hour.

After further discussion a ballot was taken, resulting: Stewart 129, Agnew 62. Stewart's nomination was then made unanimous.

For lieutenant governor the following names were placed in nomination: Levi Bird Duff, of Allegheny; Colonel William McMichael, of Philadelphia; Charles S. Wolf, and Major Merrick, of Tioga. Wolf asked permission to have his name withdrawn, saying he had a decided and unalterable conviction that he could best serve the cause by not having a place on the ticket. McMichael's name was also withdrawn. The results of the ballot was, Duff, 144, Merrick, 41. On motion of Mr. Merrick, Duff's nomination was made unanimous.

For secretary of internal affairs Senator Mapes nominated Major Merrick and he was nominated by acclamation as was also Colonel William McMichael for Congressman-at-Large, amid enthusiastic cheers and applause.

For supreme judge the following nominations were made: Ebenezer McJunkin, Butler county; C. B. Penrose, of Philadelphia; James R. Ludlow, of Philadelphia; T. Clark Hare, of Philadelphia; Thomas R. Finletter, of Philadelphia.

Judge Penrose declined.

The chair then announced that the nominees before the convention were Ebenezer McJunkin and Thomas R. Finletter. The name of Mr. McJunkin was withdrawn and at 6.05 an adjournment until 8 p. m. was ordered.

When the convention reassembled the name of George Junkin, a leading member of the Philadelphia bar, was presented as a candidate for supreme judge, and the name of Judge Finletter having been withdrawn Mr. Junkin's nomination was made unanimous.

In response to calls Senator Stewart addressed the convention accepting the nomination.

The ticket is as follows:

Governor—Senator John Stewart, of Franklin county.

Lieutenant Governor—Levi Bird Duff, of Allegheny.

Secretary of Internal Affairs—Major George W. Merrick, of Tioga county.

Supreme Judge—George Junkin, of Philadelphia

Congressman-at-Large—Colonel William McMichael, of Philadelphia.

Rumors of War.

CAIRO, May 24.—The ministry continue hostile preparations. A line of torpedoes is being laid along the coast. The native carpenters and smiths have been summoned to the citadel to day. All the officers were summoned to the Abdin barracks yesterday and required to swear to defend the government against intervention. An attempt has been made to exact a similar undertaking from the Bedouin Sheiks, but they refuse to pledge themselves to resist Turkish intervention. The united squadron has contracted for three months' provisions.

LONDON, May 24.—A dispatch from Cairo states that the situation is hourly becoming worse.

The Jews in Russia.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 24.—The regulations agreed upon by the committee of ministers and approved by the emperor, provides that Jews henceforth be prohibited from settling outside of towns and villages except where Jewish settlements already exist. The Jews are prohibited from trading on Sundays and Christian holidays. These regulations only apply to governments where the Jews are permanently settled. All contracts of purchase or tenancy with Jews are provisionally suspended.

Hanged by a Mob.

CHICAGO, Ill., May 24.—A Galveston special says: At Belton between 1 and 2 o'clock Sunday morning, an organized mob one hundred strong took from the jail Sam Holten, white, and Jim Keyes, colored, and carried them three quarters of a mile from the public square and hanged them to an oak tree. The bodies were found yesterday. Holton was charged with several crimes but had never been convicted. Keyes was a low negro and charged with an aggravated assault.

For headache, sick headache take Peruna.

Arrested.

POTTSVILLE, May 22.—Patrick Tigue, a laborer, was killed at the Cuyler Colleiry, Raven Run. After Mine Inspector Mauchlin had examined the breast where the accident occurred, he caused the arrest of Charles Asker, the inside boss, and Paul Quick, the miner for whom Tigue labored, for violating the ventilation laws. The inspector alleged that the breast was not properly timbered. Asker and Quick swore that the roof was as solid as a rock and did not need timbering. When Tigue was killed he was in the breast behind Quick, the latter was near the breast and was not injured. The case was up before 'Squire Dengler, of Shenendoah. Charles Asker, the boss, was also arrested on a second charge. The inspector found that three shutes were being driven about one hundred feet inside of the air course. The air, therefore, about the shutes was impure. In the face of the testimony of the inspector, three miners named Paul Quick, Thomas Craiger and Daniel Kenny swore that the ventilation was good. The parties arrested were placed under bail, and it looks as though the affair would have to be adjudicated by the court.

Murder.

BALTIMORE, May 23.—Frank Burkman, alias Frank Burke, was arrested in this city last night on the charge of petit larceny. To-day he confessed that he killed Captain Edward Nelson and his colored mate on board the sloop Fanny Southard, in Machioc creek, a small arm of the Potomac river, in Virginia, on May 4. He is of German parentage and twenty-two years old. He is now in jail to await a requisition from Virginia. He declares the homicides were in self-defense.

Snow Storm in Iowa.

DAVENPORT, Ia., May 23.—At 2 o'clock this morning a heavy snow storm set in here and continued for four and a half hours. Fully three inches of snow fell, but at daylight only about an inch was on the ground, because of melting. No such a storm is remembered as having occurred here before. The nearest to it was on the 7th of May, 1864, when about the same kind of a storm prevailed. The frost yesterday morning did much damage to vegetables and small fruits in this region.

Lynch Law.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., May 22.—A band of vigilants have been chasing eight horse thieves in Missouri for over two weeks. Three were captured, near Kirbyville, and lynched. The other five escaped, but one has since been killed, one mortally shot and a third captured and in jail. The other two are now hemmed in on White river and will be captured to-day and lynched.

Frost.

BISMARCK, May 24.—The reports of extreme cold weather in this section were greatly exagerated. On Sunday the mercury reached freezing point, which is the coldest in the history of the signal service records at this point for this time of the year. It is warm again now, and the growing wheat is looking fine. The frost did no damage other than to a few well-advanced gardens.

Pink-Eye.

EASTON, May 22.—The Philipsburg, N. J., horse-car line was compelled this evening to stop running. Since three o'clock all their horses have been taken suddenly ill with a disease resembling pink-eye. One died in harness. It is the most prosperous line in the town, employing a number of men and owning many horses.

York County Delegates.

YORK, Pa., May 24.—The democratic county committee to-day elected Hon. Levi Maish senatorial. E. D. Zeigler, John Blackford, Frank Jones and John Logan representative delegates to the state convention. Chauncey F. Black will be supported by the York county delegation for lieutenant governor.

Cuticura

THE NEW BLOOD PURIFIER

Resolvent

I will now state that I made a miraculous cure of one of the worst cases of skin disease known. The patient is a man forty years old; had suffered fifteen years. His eyes, scalp and nearly his whole body presented a frightful appearance. Had had the attention of twelve different physicians, who prescribed the best remedies known to the profession, such as iodide potassium, arsenic, corrosive sublimate, sarsaparilla, etc. Had paid $500 for medical treatment with but little relief. I prevailed upon him to use the CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and the CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP externally. He did so, and was completely cured. The skin on his head, face, and many other parts of his body, which presented a most loathsome appearance, is now soft and smooth as an infant's with no scar or trace of the disease left behind. He has now been cured twelve months.

Reported by F. H. BROWN, Esq., Barnwell, S. C.

SCROFULA SORE.

Rev. Dr.——, in detailing his experience with the CUTICURA REMEDIES, said that through Divine Providence one of his parishioners was cured of a scrofulous sore, which was slowly draining away his life, by the CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP externally. The poison that had fed the disease was completely driven out.

ECZEMA.

Sixteen months since an eruption broke out on my leg and both feet, which turned out to be eczema, and caused me great pain and annoyance. I tried various remedies with no good results, until I used the CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP externally, which entirely cured me so that my skin is as smooth and natural as ever.

TESTED AND FOUND WORTHY.

In order to bring more fully before the notice of the people the value of a true and tried remedy, we give the following reliable testimonial from one of the many who have been cured, and whose reputation for veracity cannot be questioned.

WOODBURY, N. J., March 20, 1882.

SWEDISH BITTERS CO.:

GENTLEMEN.—I have suffered with dyspepsia and its horrible effects for many years. Have spent hundreds of dollars with physicians and in patent medicines, with no avail. I have been unable to eat meats of any kind, and could not retain water on my stomach, and was unable to sleep at night. I was induced to procure and try a bottle of your Swedish Bitters, and can conscientiously say that its use was followed by beneficial results. I can now sit down and enjoy a hearty meal of meats and vegetables of any kind and have gained sixteen pounds in three weeks and can cordially recommend it to others.

Yours respectfully,
AUGUSTUS PREHL,
Prop'r of Woodbury City Coach Line, Prehl's Livery and Accommodation Stables.

The Garman-Cowdrick Wedding.

At 7:45 o'clock on Tuesday evening a beautiful ceremony took place in the handsome residence of our popular townsman, Morris Cowdrick, Esq., on east Linn street. The fairest night of the season, all nature kissed by Luna's pure beams and glowing with the new life of spring time combined to make the surroundings accord perfectly with the spirit of the occasion. All was bright and beautiful within, and the little company which assembled to witness the wedding of Mr. Allen Garman, son of Daniel Garman, Esq., to Miss Ella, the beautiful daughter of Mr. Morris Cowdrick, felt that an event was taking place which would be fraught with highest happiness to the contracting parties.

Rev. Mr. Bonnell, rector of St. Paul's P. E. church, Lock Haven, was present to solemnize the event and at the appointed hour entered the parlor arrayed in robe and surplice—the sacred signet of his office. He was followed by the bride leaning upon the arm of the groom. They were about to take upon themselves those vows of eternal constancy which would cement their lives together forever, and an appearance of perfect happiness and high appreciation of the importance of the occasion was visible upon the countenance of each. The costume of the bride was of rich and elegant brown silk which well set off her peculiar style of beauty. The groom, who is a handsome young man almost six feet in height, was dressed in the conventional black dress suit. The full Episcopal service was used, the bride being given away by her father. It was one of the most impressive and æsthetic ceremonies ever witnessed in this place, and will leave a lasting impression upon the minds of all who were present, causing those yet unmarried to long for the same happy event in their own lives and reminding the more sedate married ones of the time when they also took upon themselves the solemn vows.

But all such scenes must end and the ceremony which made them man and wife also terminated. Then they received the congratulations of their friends. Hearty wishes for their future welfare and happiness were expressed by all. The guests were bidden to partake of an elegant repast which for profusion and elegance has seldom been surpassed.

Evidences of the popularity of the happy pair followed. First came a serenade by a crowd of young boys, then came the Undine hose company in a body to pay their respects, who were followed by the intimate companions of the groom making the air resound with the distracting music of drums and horns.

The presents received, although not numerous were extremely elegant and costly. Among them were $100 in gold and several sets of silver and china. We tender the happy couple our sincere wishes for their future prosperity.

The Beginning of Pentecost.

Tuesday evening began the Hebrew festival of Shabnoth, or Weeks, which is better known by its name of Pentecost, it being the fiftieth day from the Passover. It is the anniversary of the revelation upon Sinai when the decalogue was given to Moses and Israel. In the Jewish synagogues the account of the event given by the great leader in Exodus, xix, 20, is recited and appropriate prayers are offered. It is considered by the Jews as a festival which concerns all races and creeds, and the day is usually selected by reason of this especial significance for administering the rite of confirmation in the synagogues of the reformed class and is observed with the greatest solemnity.

"Beauty."

The prevailing taste in dogs is about as ludicrous as that in flowers or the painting of houses. There is a fashionably gotten up canine in Bellefonte that might once have been a black spaniel, or other shaggy dog, but now the hair is all shaved off except small tufts around its knees and neck. The dog's tail, also, is abreviated to about half its original length. To this disfigured animal has been given the name of "Beauty."

—On Tuesday a new case of genuine small pox was reported to the city authorities of Altoona, the sufferer being a man named John D. Clare, who came to that city from Baltimore about two weeks ago, and who has been boarding since at the West End hotel, corner Tenth avenue and Fifteenth street. As the hotel has many boarders it was deemed advisable to remove him, and as the poor directors have signified their willingness to take charge of such cases he was removed to the pest house on the county farm Tuesday evening.

—The car works were not sold last week. The next move to be taken in reference to them has not been announced.

Death of Mrs. Catharine Musser.

The many friends of the lady whose name is given in the above title will be pained, though not surprised, to learn of her death which occurred Wednesday morning, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Chris. Dale, at Pleasant Gap. Deceased was quite an aged lady. She was born in January, 1805, making her age at the time of death over 77 years. She was endowed with a strong constitution and had always enjoyed admirable health. Unceasingly she performed her usual avocations until a few months ago, when the vital forces of life began to wear out and she was compelled to rest. Still she sank gradually but certainly, and for several weeks before the final dissolution took place she was not able to take any food. When asked, however, if she felt any physical pain she answered "No." Patiently she waited until her Redeemer bade her lay aside this tenement of clay, and her spirit burst the bars of death to enter upon eternal life.

Deceased was the mother of eight children. Two have preceded her to heaven and six still live to mourn her death. Those who survive are three daughters—Mrs. Chris. Dale, Mrs. Kreps and Mrs. Stover; and three sons—John Musser, Henry Musser and Samuel Musser—all well known and esteemed citizens of this county.

She was a devout member of the Lutheran church and died in the full confidence of a blessed immortality. The funeral took place last Friday morning.

The Small-Pox at Houtzdale.

We would very much dislike to do any injustice to the town of Houtzdale and the townships surrounding and would much prefer to believe the cheery words which the officials of Houtzdale send out to the world in connection with the existence of small pox in that locality, but we would just as much dislike to deceive our readers with false news. Only recently we noticed an item the purport of which was that there had been only six cases of genuine small pox in Houtzdale and that these having all recovered the town might be visited with perfect safety. Yet on Tuesday evening we had a conversation with a reputable gentleman who had been in Houtzdale on that day and who would have no occasion to misrepresent the state of affairs, and he declares that there are now in Houtzdale and surrounding country no less than fifty six cases of small pox and varioloid. He says the most of these cases are outside of the town, but they are all confined to a scope of country not more than a mile in extent. Now, if this statement is true, the authorities of Houtzdale are guilty of a great wrong when they represent that there are very few cases of the disease in their vicinity. If they are not true they are being very gravely libeled. —Altoona Tribune.

—A lady engaged to be married, and getting sick of her bargain, applied to a friend to help her untie the knot before it was too late. "Oh, certainly," she replied, "it is very easy to untie it now, while it is a beau knot."

"I don't think I ever saw Mr. Podgers in better spirits," remarked a gayly-dressed garrulous old lady, who was criticising the guests at a ball with the ease and familiarity of an accomplished connoisseur. "He has reason to be," meekly interposed her companion, a little bald-headed man, with a most doleful expression of countenance. "It's the anniversary of his wife's death.

Consumption.

To prevent night sweats, to ease the cough and arrest emaciation and decline, no other form of malt or medicine can possibly equal Malt Bitters. This original nutrient and tonic is rich in nourishment and strength. It tides the patient over the most critical stages of the disease, digests and assimilates food, enriches and purifies the blood. It builds up the system by stimulating into new life the entire process of digestion.

I have just received the Largest, Finest, and in every way the Best Stock of ever offered in this town. I can show you ware heavier in the metal, finer in the finish, with more weight of silver to the square inch than you ever saw before. I am now buying nothing less than which is a grade heavier than any other. But one of the most important items relating to these goods is the price I can sell them at. Taking the exclusive sale of them in this county enables me to buy large quantities. Large quantities entitles me to the lowest prices and largest rebates. Giving you these advantages enables you to buy these fine goods, never higher, and sometimes lower than the most common goods which are entitled to be called silverware.

—If the Philadelphia Times has one mission above another it is to foment strife in the ranks of the Republican party. It is its custom to tie to every rag-tag and bob-tail offspring of this great party and never support anything of respectability. Happily its support has always proven detrimental and we have no desire that it shall do otherwise.

THE LAST DAY.

Closing Exercises of the Public Schools on Friday—A Very Successful Event.

The concluding session of the public schools of Bellefonte ended Friday afternoon with exercises of a notable nature, which were participated in by the more advanced pupils in the schools on the first floor of the building. Quite a large number of visitors were present who expressed themselves highly pleased by all they saw and heard. The exercises consisted of readings, recitations and declamations by the pupils, interspersed with appropriate songs. The performances were all good, equally deserving commendation and reflect creditably upon the teachers and pupils. About an hour and a half was consumed in going through the very full and excellent programm e which was as follows:

PROGRAMME.

Song.....The Summer.....By school.
Recitation.."Popping Corn,"..M. Guggenheimer.
Declamation,"The hidden treasure,"..L. Cooney.
Song.....The Grass, The Gras ,".....School.
Declamation,....."Space,".....Chas. Moore.
Declamation,....."Polyphemus and Ulysses,"
Willie Keller.
Quartette.....Pealing Chimes.
Reading,....."Rory O'More, or Good Omens."
Blanche Fauble.
Declamation,....."What a Little Boy knows about Things,".....Walter Lembkey.
Solo,....."Twickemham Ferry,".....Ada Yearick.
Quartette,....."Bright Merry Smiles."
Recitation,...."Maggie and I."...Kate M. Shultz.
Song,..... ....."The Farmer."..... .....By school.
Recitation,....."The Stranger in the Pew."
Emma Herkheimer.
Declamation....."The Country Customer,"
Morris E. Swartz.
Song,..... ....."Summer Rain."
Reading,....."One in Blue and One in Grey."
Minnie Cook.
Declamation,....."The Blue and the Grey,"
Harry Keller.
Patriotic Glee,....."Let the Hills and Vales Resound."....By school.

Of the above programme all was so well rendered that we hesitate to single out any for special mention or commendation. Among the performances which showed evidences of careful preparation, however, were the declamations of Chas. Moore and Morris E. Swartz; the readings by Miss Mamie Cook and Miss Blanche Fauble and the recitations by Miss Kate Shultz and Miss Emma Herkheimer. The piece recited by Miss Kate Shultz, entitled "Maggie and I," was so rendered that all were impressed with the natural gifts of the lady—gifts which well might arouse desires to cultivate them. While Chas. Moore showed to all the freedom careful training gives, Master Walter Lembkey to an equal degree exhibited the force of naturalness and ability to personate. The "mischievous boy" seemed to be Walter and none other. The closing part was made to bear on the sentiments incident to Decoration Day, consisting of a reading by Mamie Cook, entitled, "One in Blue and One in Grey," and a declamation, "The Blue and the Grey," by Harry Keller. The delivery of Mr. Keller was excellent and the audience seemed to thoroughly take in the nobility of the true soldier. The closing song was a "Patriotic Glee," and as sung with vigor by the school, sent all away with light hearts and pleasant thoughts. Messrs. C. P. Hewes and J. C. Meyer deserve credit for the excellent character of the music produced.

The Presbyterian Church on Sunday.

The Presbyterian church, the largest house of worship in Bellefonte, was thronged on Sunday morning with a congregation supposed to number about 900 persons. The most conspicuous part of this assemblage was Gregg Post, G. A. R., about eighty strong, who marched in a body to the church. They conducted themselves with much dignity during the service. Rev. A. B. Jack, of Hazelton, officiated in the pulpit with marked ability, his sermon being appropriate to the occasion and also having reference to the near approach of Decoration Day. In the evening, also, the church was well filled and the discourse listened to with interest.

The Fishing Party.

Messrs. Cal. Harper, F. P. Blair, Nelson Lucas, 'Squire Smith, and other gentlemen composed a fishing party which spent most of last week in the vicinity of Benner's Run, returning on Saturday. They report a very pleasant expedition with much success in catching the finny tribe, considering that only two days were spent in fishing and the grand total of their angling amounted to 498 fish. Mr. F. P. Blair seems to have been the hero of the party, having killed three tremendous snakes and caught on the last day, alone, one hundred fish. They all seem to be improved, physically, by their expedition.

—Fireworks, gunpowder and noise have been forbidden in Philadelphia on the Fourth of July, but the small towns will indulge in enough of these to make up for this seeming lack of patriotism in the city of the first Continental Congress.

—William S. Watson, ex-cashier of the Williamsport West Branch bank, who lately was reported to have gone to South America with a woman whom he loved better than his wife, was seen recently in St. Louis.

The Soldiers in Altoona.

Company B, numbering thirty-nine men, arrived in Altoona at 8:50 o'clock Friday morning. They were accompanied by Lieutenant Colonel D. H. Hastings, Captain Amos Mullen, First Lieutenant George L. Potter and Second Lieutenant H. D. Hale.

The inspection took place at an early hour and it is unofficially reported that Company B came off with flying colors, making a record equal to the best of any company present.

After the inspection Colonel Burchfield formed the regiment into a hollow square and the presentation of the beautiful stand of colors took place. The colors, which are the gift of admiring friends of the regiment in Altoona—though the greater part of the credit is due to Mr. W. Sargent, Jr.—consist of a beautiful silk national flag, on which is inscribed in golden letters "Fifth Regiment Infantry, N. G. Pa.," a magnificent state flag inscribed in like manner, and two silk guidons or markers, inscribed with the figure "5" To Edmund Shaw, Esq., was assigned the pleasant duty of presenting the colors, which he did in well chosen words.

The colors were received in the name of the regiment by Major D. S. Keller, assistant adjutant general of the Second brigade, in a speech which was much admired for its beauty of language and sentiment.

The soldiers then repaired to the hotels where dinner had been ordered for them free of charge. They ate like warriors who had seen the enemy and got way with him. The staff and line officers were the guests of Mr. W. Sargent, Jr., acting as volunteer aid on Colonel Burchfield's staff, at a banquet which was spread in the parlors of the Logan House at half past 1 o'clock. The table was set in the form of a cross, Major Keller being seated at what might be called one end of the beam and Colonel Burchfield facing him at the other end. As the courses of the programme came and went the good humor of the officers began to assert itself, and there was no lack of mirth in the neighborhood of the seats occupied by Colonel Hastings, Captain Stewart and Major Harris. Colonel Hastings proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. Sargent for the generous entertainment provided and as might have been expected it prevailed unanimously.

The resignation of Major Woleslagle was received and Captain Samuel W. Davis, of Company A, Ebensburg, was unanimously elected in his place. The election of Major Davis advances Company B to the 3d position, making it the color company of the regiment.

The First Church Sociable.

MR. EDITOR:—Some time ago a notice appeared in the columns of your paper in regard to church sociables, their importance and organization, and naming the church that first organized a church sociable in Bellefonte, as one of the auxiliaries to aid in doing church work, and stated that the Lutheran church had followed this good example, and had just held its second or third meeting. There is no intention to find fault with this important help in church work—rather to urge the necessity of all such helps—and, at the same time, correct a wrong impression in regard to the organization in the Lutheran church.

The church sociable, in connection with the St. John's Evangelical Lutheran church of Bellefonte, was organized and held its first meeting Wednesday, December 5, 1877, and with two or three exceptions, has met once a month since that time. Unless the time of meeting is postponed for special reasons, it meets regularly on the evening of the first Wednesday of every month.

This organization has been in successful working order for over four years, and has thus far been entirely free from anything objectionable in the matter of the exercises, and has inculcated an encouraging and growing interest in church work on the part of the young members and children.

The next meeting will be held on Wednesday evening, June 7, in the lecture room of the church, and all that feel like attending are always welcome. A MEMBER.

—The Eastern District Sunday-school convention will convene at Lock Haven on Thursday, June 8. It will be a very large gathering, embracing delegates from at least a dozen places, including Bellefonte. Rev. G. G. Skinner, of Bloomsburg, well known in Bellefonte, will be present. Rev. J. M. Palmer, the gentlemanly young pastor of the church in this place, will deliver the address of welceme to the delegates.

—It is rumored that another "social lunch" will be given under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. during the first week of July.

Reminiscences of a Counterfeiter.

Colonel Louis J. Sherman, the noted counterfeiter, died on Tuesday of last week in the Eastern Penitentiary of Pennsylvania. There are many citizens of this place and county, especially those in the vicinity of Lemont and Pine Grove, whose memories will revert to him when they see his name in print and they will recollect when this man carried on his operations in Centre and Huntingdon counties, often to the great terror of the residents where his depredations were committed.

We do not know where he was born, but it is said that he came of good old German stock, and his mother being unable to properly attend to the education of her four sons, they were all placed in the care of a Mrs. Van Court, the wife of a once well-known Presbyterian minister, who did her best to bring the boys up properly and to instill into their minds the rigid doctrines of old school Presbyterianism. After the mother's death Louis was apprenticed to the tailoring business, but being of a restless, adventurous disposition the close confinement of the shop was irksome, and he was constantly devising schemes to make money and see the world.

About the year 1856 he came to this county and engaged with his brother in marble cutting, at one time having a shop in this place in the vicinity of the Diamond and also carrying on the same business in Pine Grove. While at the latter place he committed several robberies, and the expeditions over the mountains in search of him are among the records of exciting events of that section.

He married a Miss Ann Moyer, of Pine Grove, who is described as a beautiful young woman, and whose life in his companionship was necessarily full of vicissitudes and trials. He is said to have been unusually agile and muscular, making him a terror to the community.

When the war broke out he went into the army, and was noted as a brave and fearless soldier, being entrusted with numerous secret missions requiring great skill and cool daring.

It was after this time that he became noted as a counterfeiter. He went on from bad to worse until his career ended as described above.

We have been able to present but a meagre outline of what might be made a thrilling narrative of his exploits in this and Huntingdon counties, and we invite our readers who remember the circumstances to write us anything in regard to him that may be deemed interesting.

—Longfellow needs no monument to his memory. The best work of the most skillful sculptor could not so deeply impress upon the minds and hearts of the people his true greatness as do the words of living light, of moral force and power which he has written. But a grateful and admiring populace must find a means of testifying to their feelings, and they can best do it by employing the genius of skilled artists to call to memory the loved ones by rearing monuments of granite or marble. An association has been formed which hopes to secure part of the grounds upon which the late poet's home was located in Cambridge, Mass., to keep it "forever open to the people." For this purpose the association solicit one dollar subscriptions from all who are able and willing to give. Contributions should be sent to John Bartlett, Treasurer, P. O. box, 1590, Boston, Mass.

The Triennial Assessment.

This is the year of the triennial assessment, and not only are the assessors interested in making assessments, but the people who have property to assess have an interest in seeing that the work is correctly and properly done. The last triennial assessment was made in 1880, some six months too late, from some misunderstanding of Attorney General Palmer's instructions or a wrong construction on his part of the law. It should have been done in November or December of 1879, instead of the early part of 1880, hence the necessity of making it during the above named months in this year and getting things in shape for making return to the State Department prior to March 1, 1883.

—While Rev. Crittenden, the "little missionary," was traveling through the oil regions lately he visited the new well which is said to flow 500 barrels of oil per day. He is of opinion that the flow will gradually increase until it reaches perhaps 1000 barrels. He was much pleased with his reception in that region. One thing that he particularly noticed is that most of the business men are young, those of mature years being the exception.

—The gorgeous peony will soon burst into blossom.

Cut to Pieces in the Railroad Tunnel.

The Altoona Tribune relates the details of a terrible casualty in the railroad tunnel at Gallitzin, on Thursday morning, as follows:

About 4 o'clock yesterday morning the night watchman in the railroad tunnel at Gallitzin discovered the mutilated remains of a man on the south track, about midway in the tunnel. He noticed the proper authorities at Gallitzin and repairmen were sent in with a handcar to gather up the remains and bring them out. That was not accomplished without much difficulty as the fragments of the man's body were strewed along the track a great distance, the unfortunate victim having evidently been killed several hours previous while walking through the tunnel, and a number of trains afterwards passed over them. The fragments were put into a box, taken to Gallitzin and turned over to the authorities, who had them interred on the hill, near Gallitzin, yesterday evening. Two bundles of clothes tied in a red cotton handkerchief, and a paper parcel in which was a suit of overclothes were found on the track near the remains. From papers found in the man's clothes, including a passport, it was learned that his name was Michael Seiler, that he was a miller by trade and that he had only been in the country about one month. His age was about 36 years.

A Budget from Spring Mills.

May 25, 1882.

D. W. Duncan, agent of the Pennsylvania railroad, accompanied by his sister, has gone west on a visit. C. A. Krape, formerly a clerk in the office, has charge of it until the return of Mr. Duncan.

Dr. J. B. Leitzell will start for Kansas on Monday, anticipating much pleasure from his visit to the West.

Prof. Reiter's term of school is half expired, and has thus far been considered a success. He has won the confidence and esteem of parents and students generally.

Our enterprising citizen, Mr. Grenoble, continues to make improvements about his hotel which add to its attractiveness. If we had a few more men like Mr. Grenoble, who take a proper pride in erecting substantial buildings, Spring Mills would soon become a town. SPRING.

Patton Paragraphs.

Many items concerning Patton township appear in your paper from your Stormstown correspondent.

The nominations made by the regular Republicans at Harrisburg are favorably received in this section.

The grass and grain which looked poor in the early part of spring are improving.

Two accidents—one of them fatal—recently occurred at the Scotia mines.

James Crust had one of his legs caught between the cars and badly mashed a few days ago.

Mr. Coleman Wyn, superintendent of the mines, while assisting in raising cars a distance of seventeen feet to the trestle, slipped and fell backward, alighting on his head and shoulders. He lay in an unconscious condition four days, when he expired. His death occasions much regret. OTHELLO.

Dog Law.

The following from an exchange in reference to the dog law will apply pertinently to several persons whom we might mention in this section: "If anyone is attacked on the highway by a dog the party has a right to kill the dog, and the owner can be held accountable for any injury inflicted by the animal. Even on the premises of the owner of a dog, should a party be attacked and injured, after endeavoring to protect himself, the owner can be made responsible for damages inflicted, provided it can be shown that at the time he was in pursuit of business or on a friendly visit. If a dog by barking at passing horses and vehicles occasions any damage, its owner is liable for the loss sustained. Thus the law very properly affords people protection for loss or injury caused by dogs."

Accidents at the Car Works.

A few days ago a man named Hassinger had one of his hands mashed while working about the engine at the car works.

On Thursday George Barclay, who was employed in the blacksmith shop, was so unfortunate as to be seriously burned by an explosion of gas under the boiler. Both of his hands and his face were much disfigured by the accident.

—A bill is before the Senate and House which provides for the issue of a new postal card to which will be attached a flap to conceal the message, thus ensuring secrecy. The important objection to it is that it will tend to greatly increase the number of love epistles, as every youth who thinks he has made a "mash" will wish to express himself in tender sentiments when it can be done for a cent.

—Our distinguished townsman, Governor James A. Beaver, delivered the oration at Lancaster on Decoration day.
